

Cameron Isiah Murphy

April 19, 2009 - January 1, 2025

Cameron Isiah Murphy, age 15, of Union, Kentucky, passed away unexpectedly on Wednesday, January 1, 2025.

With heavy hearts, we announce the passing of our beloved son, brother, grandson, nephew, cousin and friend. He was a bright and witty soul, always quick with a one-liner that could bring a smile to anyone's face. This sharp sense of humor was a gift from his father, and it never failed to light up the room, no matter the circumstances.

Cameron's kind and caring nature was another of his remarkable traits. He had a rare gift for understanding when someone needed help or comfort, a compassionate instinct he inherited from his mother. His ability to read a room and offer support, even when he didn't have to, showed just how deeply he cared about those around him.

Cameron's laughter, love, and beautiful spirit will forever be missed by his family and all who knew him. He is survived by his loving parents, Ryan and Amber Murphy of Union, Kentucky; his brother Aiden Murphy; maternal grandparents Robert (Kristi) Hitchcock and Rose Garvie; paternal grandparents Randy (Carol) Murphy and JoAnne (Bud) Clagg; great grandparents Lynda Hitchcock, Edna Murphy, and Leo Sheets; aunts and uncles Lynda (Josh) Garver, Teisha Hitchcock, Robbie (Nichole) Hitchcock, Victoria (Devin) Boylen, Christian Hitchcock, David Grant, Misty Murphy, Randi (Josh) Draves and Nathen (Sydney) Murphy and his many cousins. Cameron was predeceased by his great grandparents Robert Hitchcock, Jan

VanBuskirk, Don and Carol Murphy, great aunt Kathy Poet and great aunt and uncle Pamela and Brian Wilson.

A time of gathering will take place at the Brown Corners United Brethren Church on Saturday, January 11, 2025 from 11 A.M. until the time of service at 1 P.M. with Pastor Jeremiah Ketchum officiating. Memorial contributions are suggested to the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (<https://supporting.afsp.org/campaign/Cameron-Isiah-Murphy>).

“ One thing that’s personally helped me a lot during this troubled time is realizing that Cameron truly wasn’t MY anything. He was simply an amazing, beautiful person that I had the privilege and pleasure of being so close to. The moment that I accepted he isn’t ruled by personal labels or of concepts, the moment suffering was alleviated. Of course I’ll still cry, of course it still hurts. I think it’s important to let myself feel. Though, I understand he wasn’t owned by anything or anyone, especially with how individualistic he was, and that knowledge has helped me remember that all earthly things are temporary, and his energy is ever present !! <3 Also, in one of our favorite games, Brothers: A Tale of Two Sons (a game that he actually let me know they just made a remake of) the two brothers save someone from suicide <3

“ In my eyes, Cam and I were both yin and yang for one another. When strongest, we contained the other. I didn't see him much in the last remnants of his life. Us speaking and us staying up that night was everything to me. I told the people I loved about it, and how I couldn't wait to see you. You started as my Yang, and ended as my yin, though, we both were both. When I picked up the hat I have with the symbol, and thought of you, my light turned off. Bless me like you did in life, my brother. My only. I love you infinitely.

“ I met Cameron on an online game, we instantly became very close. He was a levelheaded kid that I would even go to for life advice despite our age difference. He was very wise and crazy good at every game we played together. He was like a brother to me even though I never told him that. He was a really good friend that I honestly never deserved. I remember something I said to him that I keep looking back on, I told him that there is going to be a day where we stop playing together and forget that we ever played games for hours at a time. I'm very glad to say I was wrong about something I said that day. That thing being that I would forget him and all the countless hours of games we played together. I could never and will never let those memories die. There are games I won't be able to play for a while. Things just won't be the same now that he's gone. It kills me that I will never get to talk to you about the end of bloodborne. Or even stay up all night with you on sea of thieves. It kills me that I will never see "Chickenlove is online" again. So much I wish I would have done. So much I wish I would have said. All I can say now is rest easy little bro, we are all going to miss you.

sincerely,
Adam Stone (AKA BassSnail)

“ I knew Cameron his entire life. He was my best friend. My everything. I still remember meeting him as a baby, and us forming a bond then that will never dissipate, or be fully understood by others. He never once even thought about judging me for being gay, and I always thought if I were to marry a man, it would be Cameron, simply because he was so perfect haha. I spoke with him a while before this, and he seemed so at peace, making plans with me for new years. He was supposed to be with me that night. I can feel him with me though, giving me signs and structure. I feel his beautiful, ever present, calming energy alleviating my sorrows and wiping my tears with the warmest of feelings, and the sensation of laughter. Even if just in my car, I'll hear him tell me to breathe, and he's the only one I can listen to. His dark blue, magnetic eyes, one with the earth. His long, wonderful, curly blonde hair, dirtied up like mine. His sloping button nose, his pale and small body. His collarbones, his hands and feet. His lips and the way he looked when he slept. I miss his physicality, and I long to hold him one more time. There's so much I could have done differently and would have done differently had I not been so at peace in his energy, that perfection unknowingly placing a thin shield of denial. I think he knew. He was always so gentle, worried about and happy for me, at least when we were alone haha. He could be offensive, snarky, and had a dark, witty humor, but so do I, and whenever I was with him, I never felt pain or sorrow, only happiness. Even just talking to him. I would laugh and laugh and laugh. He's the first person I always thought of, and I was so happy that I was finally getting him to come out of his shell and be with me once more. I hope he knew just how much I loved him. I told him how he was my yin the last time we spoke. He told me he was never an introvert. I told him I knew. I told him to come out with me. He said he was “so down dude” in the happiest little tone, melancholy whispering through. Dejection. Yet it always did in some way. Except for when we were little. His hyperactive intensity balancing me out, and just making me laugh. That's the primary sensation I have in my memory. Video games, pouring all his moms soap in the bathtub, getting chased by our parents and siblings, running around during the summer times, up until the final years of his life. From the person you had plans with, Cameron, why ? You were so pretty !

Death is no barrier, and time is non linear, his spirit has been traveling along our paths since birth, simply one in infinity, and limitless, guiding. Cameron was never timid. Some people saw small and thought timid. No. He was so powerful, and so perfect at everything he ever set his mind to. He was skilled, intelligent, polite, elegant, not judge mental in the slightest, calming, hilarious and just so very real. There was never a moment where I had to question if I was being myself and if it was bad. No. I never even thought about it he made me so comfortable. The only person I'd ever routinely send the UGLIEST photos to. This is gonna be hard without your body here, but you're all around me now my baby. I hope you are at peace. My only brother, my soul. Guide me forever.

- Jordyn Lynn Cavins <3 🥰

(P.S. I see you in the cardinals that stare, the snow that flurries. I hear you in the wind chimes that blew when I learned, and feel myself accidentally brushing up against your shoulders. I scream to the wind as I cry out your name. I can't eat nor sleep. I will feel your energy when I divulge in sushi, play our favorite games, like Brothers: A Tale of Two Sons. Oddly prophetic now. We would always take turns. It was a puzzle game, and he would always be the brain of the operation. Good grades. We both hated school. Assassins creed, mainly Black Flag. Inside. Elden Ring. Limbo. Bloodborne. He adored anime, and Hollow Knight. He had a hat that said I <3 anime. It was the cutest :) We both suffered from similar ailments. I wanted to display my happiness, and share it with him. I wanted to take him alongside me, and I was so happy that I was able to speak with him one more time how we always did. Until the late morning hours. You have no idea how much I wish I didn't go to work that day. You seemed like you had so much more to say. Speaking to me like an old man, like I was ignorant. I thought something was weird. I'm so happy that I told you how much I cared for you then. I bragged about you to everyone Cameron, and even before this, I thought about you every single day. I can quote our skits and our videos because of how many times I watched them over. The night before you died, I had tried to send you one. Your name was on my tongue less than 24 hours before, my mind on you less than 10 minutes. I miss you. I miss you. ☐ I hope your spirit rests soon. You deserve that chicken little, cam cam, cammy. I'll haunt you too bro don't even worry. Embrace me when I meet you. You were always so worried to as we got older <3)

“ Oh cameron, to summarize the hours we spent is a fraction of the truth. We would play games for hours just for the little joy we got from completing it. Even though I was never amazing at any games, cameron always seem to have the skills. But he never got frustrated. he always pushed us both to better ourselves at the things we enjoy, and even the things we hate so we can enjoy them. For a whole summer we had played a simple game, the board game RISK. It's wasn't a fun game, and it's wasn't hard or easy but it wasn't the game that made it fun. It was Cameron. Sitting for hours on end just talking. Either about our family's, how are days went or even him talking about papa John pizza. A food we had loved for its simplicity.

Cameron and I shared a gift for are intelligence, school was simple and the people even simpler. We made the classes we had together work for us. Finishing the work in minutes and spending our time the way we wanted. One day I had come to school in the worst outfit ever. While everyone cracked jokes at me Cameron turned and cracked them with me. He always knew when I had a bad day and what joke would fix it.

If cameron had a phrase I heard him say more then anything is “Dude, I'm so glad”

Dude I'm so glad I met you, I'm so glad that teacher paired us up, I'm so glad I chose to stay up late with you instead of getting sleep, I'm so glad you stuck by my side, Im so glad we talked for hours, I'm so glad we shared the same interests, Dude I miss you so much.

“ Through the few 15 years I've lived before this there was only 4 days I've been in this world longer than Cam. Now it is six and with every day comes more sorrow and more healing we must do, Cameron was the closest thing to a brother I got in life. From celebrating our birthdays together to making bubble overflow on the bathtub he was my only friend I had in life for a long time. For one summer he basically lived in my room and then it was the opposite way around these past summers where I would go and spend a month with him sleeping and living out of his room. This photo was a time when we were in the side by side in a camping trip and it was flipped while backing up. Me and Cams minds thought so much alike our first instinct was to get a photo in-front of it. Cam was one of the biggest lights in my life and he was so supportive when I wanted to loose weight and he helped me with my image in life. I wish my Brother nothing but good times in his afterlife and that he can see how much everyone loved him with all their hearts! Please live peacefully now and I will forever wait until it is my time to join you, my brother Cameron.

Thank you for being such a big part of Cameron's life Drew. It was wonderful watching the two of you grow together.
